the court, and why should we deny it? The time is now at hand when your influence may be of the highest value to your people."

Also after an interminate intervalues in the hall—heard footsteps of another in the hall—heard frederick greet him.

"Ah, Sachio, you are welcome indeed. We have news for you, my friend—news that may go well with our plans."

"Command me, my dear Frederick." "And how, my lord minister?"

"In this way—by mitigating what cannot now be avoided. Listen to me. The people of any land will go far in endurance—but beyond a certain point, beware! O people have been patient. They King Michael, the king who is dear, alleved in him -and they were disposed to love his successor, the present king—whom God defend! But his acts—I speak boldly, knowing that I may speak in confidence—have allenated the people confidence—have allenated the people from him. They are oppressed by these taxes. Our treasury was bar-ren when Michael the Second ascend-ed the throne. All the royal revenues have been spent. All the royal se-curities, the investments, the jewels, the treasures of the crown, all, all disappeared when Michael the First went to his grave. The mysterious fashion in which this happened we all know."

"Or rather we all do not know!"
"Yes, rather do not know. At least they are gone. Our kingdom is bankrupt to-day—you know that. There are no further revenues which may be ob-tained—you know that also. It is a time not for extravagance but for the time not for extravagance but for the most rigid economy and self-denial of all—from king to the lowest peasant. Now, I know you are close to the king. Tell him this—that always the answer of the people in a time like this is written in one color—and that color is red! The people of France wrote their revolution in blood. I fear our own may do as much. It is time now for you to use I fear our own may do as It is time now for you to use your influence with the king against

You flatter me. But as to the ball 'Yes, the people know it and accept it. They will be there—waiting out-eids upon the street—waiting to see their king. So have other peoples waited. Do you remember anything of one George and his consort Draga? I tell you, Count Frederick, revolution is in the air. The people are demanding the answer to all their sufferings, to their poverty, their anxieties. That answer, if we do not thus insures a pure blood supply. anxieties. That answer, if we do not

"One thing. Let me be blunt and brief—have the king sober to-night! I shame to say those words—but those are my words to you. Have our monarch—whom we reverence—sober to-night! If the people see him drunken, if they find him careless, indifferent, in times like this—pout!—revolution, I tell you, and the answer written with the pen of blood."

Count Frederick apparently paused made. It will be too late then. Their wrath against the weak Michael—dissipating, wasting their substance for them—will be unappeasable. For the rest—I have made my plans. My own regiments will be faithful. The regiments of the King are none too faithful. The banditti of the desert are with us. To-morrow there will be a new king in Gretzboffen, and that king will be Frederick the First."

"You say it, then?"

Count Frederick apparently paused at this. There was a hint of something suppressed in his voice when at length he did reply.

"My lord minister, I'll see the king!"

Kitty thought that now they clasped bands. She heard the prime minister departing, each giving the other formal words of courtesy. It all had gone on within a few paces of where she stood.

Now she heard Frederick calling to his servants.

"Is it difficult—unpleasant?"
"Au contraire, it is both easy and pleasant.

"You interest me."
"I ask you, my dear Sachio, to do an easy, pleasant and interesting task. It is no more than to go this afternoon, to win in some fashion into the presence of King Michael the Second, our beloved monarch—whom we both reverence!—and then and there, by what means shall seem most expedient, to induce him to drink more wine than ever he did in one day in his life.
